Dear Parents

"Behavior is a mirror in which everyone displays his own image." - J. Von Goeth

Adolescence marks a critical period for the development of prosocial behavior. As teenagers engage in increased social interactions and explore various behaviors, fostering prosocial behavior becomes paramount.

We have partnered with UNESCO MGIEP for developing the social emotional learning of our students. As part of the program UNESCO will be conducting a research study to test the efficacy of a game based course titled Sky: Children of light in Building Prosociality.

The adolescents of today face new challenges that can negatively impact their prosocial development, such as the rise of digital technology and the fast-paced, individualistic nature of contemporary society. The objective of study is to identify effective methods to equip adolescents with essential 21st-century skills, such as prosociality, through scalable digital courses work.

You are requested to send the signed consent form for your ward to participate in the program by Monday, 22 April 2024. Each participant will receive a certificate from UNESCO MGIEP upon completion of the study.

Warm regards
